A Note from Charlie Chawke, Proprietor

Located along the beautiful banks of the River Dodder, The Dropping Well is more than just a pub-it's an establishment which has long played a part in Dublin's rich history and spirit. The Dropping Well owes its origins to the Great Famine of 1847, when this site served as a community morgue for those lost during one of Ireland's darkest times.

The Dropping Well has since evolved into one of Dublin's most loved gathering places. While much has changed, the heart of this establishment remains the same. We're committed to providing genuine, consistent and exceptional service to our patrons.

Whether you're here for a quiet pint in Boxer Maher's, a delicious meal in our 1847 restaurant, or a celebration with family and friends in one of our beautiful function spaces, we aim to make each and every visit memorable. With scenic views, cosy interiors, and a rich story to tell, The Dropping Well continues to be a place where history and hospitality come together.

Thank you for your continued support - and for making The Dropping Well a part of your story, as you are of ours.
